Sunrooms

with the Network VEKA difference...

A window to the sky! Letting the sunshine in is a breeze with an airy and impressive sunroof.

Once the reserve of light-wells and atria in lavish commercial buildings, roof-lighting has become an essential element of modern architecture and a desirable yet attainable improvement for domestic homes.

A popular inclusion in the plans to house extensions and an in-demand upgrade to existing flat-roofed rooms, modern day sunroofs can span remarkable expanses without compromising strength or insulation, and retaining the option for opening, ventilative panels.

They offer virtually unhindered views of the sky, allowing light to fill the room and creating the luxurious feeling of space that you'd expect of a conservatory or orangery. By capturing the sun's natural warmth and light, you'll find the room now lends itself to blossoming plant-life, creative and artistic activities, reading, writing and working.

In the evening, interior illumination through a sunroof adds an impressive and attractive feature to your home, creating a warm and inviting impression when viewed from the outside.

Give a new lease of life to dark and shadowy areas of your home with a sunroof from your local Network VEKA member.

With a vast array of colour and woodgrain finishes to choose from, your installer can advise you on practical and aesthetic considerations, ensuring you achieve the perfect complement to your home's existing style.

What could you do with an extra room?

The possibilities are endless with a beautifully-designed conservatory.

Often referred to as a solarium, the original purpose of a conservatory was to emulate the ideal conditions for growing tropical plants and fruits. Still great for capturing the warmth and light of the sun, their temperate climate, however, is not only suited to cultivating exotic flora.

A well-planned conservatory can act as a bridge between your home and garden, maximising the feeling of space you experience inside, while introducing an attractive yet practical feature to the grounds of your home.

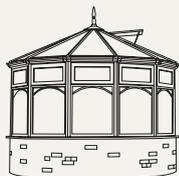

Make the most of the natural light all year round, enjoy the feeling of al-fresco dining even when the weather is inclement, and feel closer to nature without leaving the house.

Modern-day ventilation and heating mean you can enjoy a conservatory's warmth and near-panoramic views even during the long, winter months.

Whether you decide to use it as a place to relax, a games room, a studio for painting or drawing, or a second living room, is up to you!

Your Network VEKA installer can guide you through stylistic options, from traditional Victorian and Edwardian-inspired designs to bespoke, modern looks, tailored to contemporary homes. With a variety of colour and woodgrain finishes available, the perfect match for your home could be just a conversation away.

Orangeries

with the Network VEKA difference...

Would you like a second living or dining room with a more al-fresco feel?

A perfect half-way-house between the versatility of a conservatory and the original structure and style of your home.

As the name might suggest, the origins of the orangery lie in the pursuit of growing sweet oranges, becoming popular with 17th century Dutch gentry before being introduced to wealthy English estates soon after.

Often considered the conservatory for people who don't like conservatories, orangeries typically feature less glazing than their more-prevalent counterparts, both in their walls and roofing. As a result they are normally cooler than a conservatory during the summer months and have better natural heat retention throughout the winter.

Your local Network VEKA member can advise on planning considerations, internal finish, heating and ventilation issues.

Naturally, all Network VEKA-installed Conservatories, Orangeries and Sunroofs are covered by the long-life, low-maintenance and insurance-backed guarantees associated with all members' work.

Orangeries have grown in popularity as, in comparison to conservatories, some argue their substantial frames appear more 'original' to a property than a retrofit conservatory. What both have in common, however, is the wide variety of uses you can put them to.

Would you like a second living or dining room with a more al-fresco feel? Perhaps you need a room, flooded with natural light, for artistic pursuits like painting, drawing or photography. Or maybe, like the orangery's Dutch pioneers, you yearn to cultivate citrus fruits and other plants that flourish in more temperate climates.

Whatever your needs, your local Network VEKA installer can guide you through the possibilities, including the vast range of colour and woodgrain finishes available to tailor your orangerie to the look of your home.
